FIT GEM AND EVER-READY RAZORS

Myriad Electrical Appliances Offer Aid to June Bride

No more excuse for such matrimonial handicaps as "breakfast nerves" and quarrels over burnt toast and over-boiled coffee that start the day off wrong. Prepared with modern appliances, breakfast can always taste "just right."

BURIED deep within the June bride is an instinct as old as womankind itself—the instinct for housekeeping and home making.

The bride of today, aided and abetted by science and engineering, which have created and produced countless attractive and efficient electrical servants and conveniences for the home, starts off with more than an even chance of putting home making on a smooth and successful basis. Long after her orange blossoms have lost their fragrance, the bride of 1936 will cherish the appliances that lend her many helping hands, that she finds pleasure in working with, that give her increasing time for "the human side of living."

Labor-Savers Needed

As hostess and wife, with a multitude of social and economic duties to perform, the June bride needs every labor-saving convenience and gadget that will help her to simplify routine, eliminate unnecessary effort and wasted time, and help her to keep fit mentally and physically. The resourceful, far-seeing bride has them.

There are electric clocks of all types, in a variety of finishes and colors, that actually tell time "by the stars," and they never need winding, regulating or oiling.

Vacuum cleaners are so light, yet so powerful and efficient, that they seem to have "floating" action, and they are equipped with a spot-light that illuminates the dark corners.

Save Time and Trouble

Electric washers and ironers, with their safety features and dependable performance, make clothes last twice as long and cut laundering time in half. Skillfully engineered metal-tube radios, with glorious tone and beautiful cabinets, are a constant source of pleasure.

There are modern-designed fans for cool comfort. . . . Sunlamps that furnish year 'round sunshine at the flick of a switch.

Last but not least, there are innumerable attractive table appliances—grills, toasters, waffle irons, chafing dishes, coffee makers, percolators, mixers and many others—just the things for preparing quick breakfasts, tasty lunches, buffet suppers and midnight snacks. With other electrical servants, they give full meaning to the phrase "better living electrically."

PINEAPPLE JUICE

Keeps Pace with the Demand

THERE is an old saying that "good things come in small packages, or something to that effect. If we were to let ourselves believe this, it would be depressing indeed. We would all have to go Pollyanna and keep reminding ourselves that there's an almost unlimited supply of the very best things—golden sunshine on a January morning, silver rain on a July afternoon, books, music, friends and food.

In Hawaii, where sunshine is dished out with so lavish a hand that people go out full of curiosity when it happens to rain, pineapples ripen on fields so vast that the supply appears unlimited. Indeed. In spite of the fact that the demand for pineapples and for pineapple juice has increased steadily, since this food-for-kings became food-for-the-people, the supply goes right on increasing with the demand. Pineapple planters and pineapple canners evidently don't believe there can ever be too much of it.

To Your Health!

And where there's pineapple there's bound to be pineapple juice. So, it is in anything but "small packages" that this good drink comes to us. Use it, therefore, in abundance. The following are only a few of many ways that are daily being devised to enjoy this healthful, delicious juice in cans.

Holiday Fruit Creamade: Mash your bananas thoroughly, add one-half cup confectioner's sugar, one cup cream and the contents of two No. 2 cans of pineapple juice. Shake thoroughly with crushed ice in a cocktail shaker or glass jar. Unless a very large shaker is used, half the quantity should be shaken at a time. Serve immediately in tall glasses. This serves eight persons.

Marshmallow Fruit Loaf: Soften one tablespoon gelatin in one-fourth cup of canned pineapple juice, then dissolve in one cup more of canned pineapple juice which has been brought to boiling. Add one-third cup sugar and stir until dissolved. Cool, add the syrup from one cup of canned fruits for salad. When the mixture begins to stiffen, add one beaten egg white and one-half cup of cream which has been whipped. Add the fruits for salad which have been cut in suitable pieces, eight diced marshmallows and one sliced banana. Pour into a loaf pan which has been wet with cold water. Chill, turn out and slice. Garnish with whipped cream if desired. Serves eight persons.

Bible School started at the Baptist church here with a good attendance. The hours are from 2 P. M. to 4 P. M.

Meat Cuts and How to Cook Them
BEEF CHART

Every housewife is confronted with the three-day question of variety in the meals she serves. In beef we become addicted to roasts or steaks and forget all about the other good beef cuts which will give pleasing variation and be easy on the pocketbook, too. Perhaps our trouble lies in the fact that we are not as familiar as we should be with many of the possibilities offered by beef. If you are one of those whose use of beef is limited to roast or a steak, the chart given above will be invaluable in learning to identify and locate the main retail cuts of beef. The chart will show you at a glance just how each one should be cooked. We will want to preserve this chart for ready reference.

When judge Isbell resigned, another brilliant son of Virginia was made county judge in 1872. Henry T. Parrish, born in Cumberland county in 1829, came to this county when a young man and began the practice of law, and soon his ability was recognized and he was made judge, and filled the office with ability until 1889 when he resigned to practice law in the city of Roanoke, where he passed away in 1913. Judge Parrish served as Colonel of a regiment in General Malone's famous brigade from 1861 to 1865. Had Judge Parrish had the political ambition equal to his literary and legal ambition, he might easily have captured the highest office in the gift of the people of Virginia, but he discouraged every effort of his name for political office. He too added greatly to the social side of life in his community.

I have the honor of presenting to this court the picture of the second judge of Appomattox county, Henry T. Parrish. I will ask his widow, Mrs. H. T. Parrish of Roanoke, Va., to stand and be introduced to this audience. . . .

Southeast, caused uneasiness among housewives. Prices rose precipitately, but eased off, because immediate demand from consumers declined. The seriousness of the situation was reflected in reports from the crop division of the Department of Agriculture that unless rains fell soon an acute shortage will boost the price of potatoes. The carry-over this year was small, it was revealed, and Maine reported only 100 carloads of last year's holdover on hand. While weather conditions up to the middle of July will determine the extent of the shortage, it was believed by farm experts that the later crops will meet the August and September demands.

DEATH came to John Hays Hammond, eighty-one, internationally-famed mining engineer, economist and writer, at his home at Gloucester, Mass. He had lived a life high in adventure and rich in event.

And now there was another distinguished son of Appomattox, born in 1828, died in 1912. He served as Commissioner of the Revenue of this county, and in 1887 was elected clerk of this county. This son served as captain of a company, then colonel of a regiment in the Confederate Army, and I do not think I will exaggerate when I say that the South furnished no soldier more gallant than Col. Geo. W. Abbitt, whose picture I have the honor of presenting to the county. This splendid soldier distinguished himself at the dreadful battle of the Crater near Petersburg, having had his cap pierced with several bullets. His picture will be hung in the clerk's office.
